Varisco’s Reading Orientalism: Said and the Unsaid is one such attempt. If the Said apologists are finding it increasingly difficult to overlook the rhetoric of Said’s Orientalism in the wake of an ever-growing number of works that have exposed its faults—culminating with Ibn Warraq’s A Defense of the West, they show no signs of going gentle into the inevitable good night, and the book by Varisco, a professor of anthropology at Hofstra University, attempts mightily to buoy up Said’s ...
